Preface

The network EuroProj has every year an annual meeting. This year, as a new member of its Scientific Committee, I took part of it for the first time.

It took place on Costa Brava, in the small seaside town of Sant Feliu de Goixol, some 90 km north of Barcelona. We were all housed in a comfortable hotel, and according to rumours, this was the last season this hotel would be in operation catering to conferences. Then it would be turned into an Old Age People home.

The services were nice, the stay very relaxing and comfortable. No talks to prepare and give, only talks to skip. Following the tradition of going easy on the mathematical content, I concentrate on my own daily activities, no matter how minute, and the encounters with the other participants, exaggerating their foibles.
